Research Technologists and Data Scientists

Group:

This is a forum to take forward discussions which emerged at a workshop which took place in Amsterdam on the 14/15 July on the topic of New Data Scientists: Roles, Responsibilities, Education and Identities. This workshop was supported by Jisc Futures and the European Commission DG CONNECT eInfrastructures as a forum for discussion among educators, researchers and practitioners in the information sciences from Europe, North America and elsewhere of the new roles and responsibilities emerging from the growing importance of research data and the need to manage, curate, preserve and share it successfully.

It followed from a workshop held last year at Corpus Christi College, Oxford, funded by Jisc, which brought together research scientists, scholars, ICT experts, funders and others to discuss the need for new roles (under the umbrella term of "research technologists") needed to support the use of new software, services and infrastructures for research across all disciplines.
