What is Management?

Our first videoconference this term from The University of Bristol will take place on 30th November at 11.30 am and will be ideal for students considering studying Management or related degrees. <http://www.virtuallyuniversity.org.uk/Autumn1210.html>

Next Session: No sessions organised - contact the provider

The brain and the nervous system – Neuroscience from UCL

*** This session is now full *** One of VU's themes this term is the brain and the nervous system and so we are delighted to offer our first session with University College London on Neuroscience. This will take place on 5th December at 11.30 am and will seek to promote the idea that the sciences are accessible to people of all backgrounds. <http://www.virtuallyuniversity.org.uk/Autumn129.html>

Performance Pressure by Dr Rob Gray, The University of Birmingham

We have all heard the term "choking" before. In the sports arena we talk about "bricks" in basketball when the game winning free throw manifests itself as an air ball, or we speak of the "shanks" in football when a penalty kick sails over the bar in a shootout. In more academic domains, we refer to "cracking" in important test-taking situations when a test score is much lower than expected and results in a failing a course.

Mandarin

With China's importance growing ever bigger, the advantage of learning Mandarin (China's standard dialect) and developing an understanding of both China's culture and people becomes ever clearer. This course is designed to give students the language skills and cultural understanding needed to converse at an intermediate level and feel confident in doing so.

Next Session: No sessions organised - contact the provider

Have you ever wanted to take part in a space mission but are unable to make it to the National Space Centre? Why not take part from your own classroom via videoconference.

An e-Mission is a simulated mission delivered through live video conferencing and data streams. Students work together to complete challenges and evacuate residents in danger using videoconferencing. Classrooms anywhere in the world can link up to the Mission Commander at the National Space Centre's e-Mission Control.

At AS Level, students study the English Legal system, learning about how laws are made, how they are applied, and the role of various people working in the law. This includes looking at the work and relationship between parliament and judges; the powers and duties of the police; civil and criminal courts and appeals process; sentencing options, and the role of barristers, solicitors and juries.

At A2 Level, students examine Criminal Law in detail. The students develop knowledge of specific offences such as fatal and non fatal offences against the person, including homicide; offences against property including theft robbery and burglary, and attempted offences. Students must also use their knowledge to advise clients on substantive defences and demonstrate how law alters and develops to keep pace with the demands of society through the use of law reform and case precedent.

For more details please visit the Law page on the MB Learning Solutions website.
